The Dark Continent is a technically orientated simulation which moves away from the user interface of other train simulators. You drive the trains using levers and buttons by entering key commands. The simulation is based on one of the most powerful simulators available today, the iROC 2 SDK. The Dark Continent is available on Steam as a Windows PC only game. It was developed by Kerocoran Europe/Transport King and they have full responsibility for its quality and accuracy. TRACK SIGHT PHOTOS

"Escamallon de Minas is an economic management game about the mining industry. You manage a gold mine in a sleepy town where the only sound is the iron-ore truck with its noisy cargo rumble along the streets. Your goal is to make your employees happy while you get the gold out and the profit out." About The Game "This game is a classic management game, with more than a dozen unique elements. It requires strategy, because you cannot plan your economy just on the knowledge that you need gold in order to pass the inspections. Sometimes you simply must choose between paying a hefty bribe or a visit by the police, to get the job done. You also have to manage your employees' morale and workloads to get the most out of your workers. If you want to become wealthy, you will have to be patient and determined! Includes: Strategy, economic simulation, puzzle and novel elements 16 unique jobs 50 town events Daily and monthly objectives 15 different inspectors (police, tax, health) Different types of buses (tractor, lorry, bus) Over 50 road types (trees, winding roads, emerald hills, many more) Ambience with original music "Mushroom Kingdom" music-video RECOMMENDED SYSTEM REQUIREMENTS Please note that this game requires a computer running Windows 7 or higher. SteamOS-compatible systems should work. Windows 7 or higher 8GB of RAM 3GHz processor 1.5 GB of available VRAM About This Game "A Day Gone By by Wake Forest University is a game that requires you to manage a day in the life of a police officer." About The Game "A Day Gone By by Wake Forest University is a game that requires you to manage a day in the life of a police officer. You start with a squad that consists of an interesting trio of characters, including a smart young hacker, an office-bound guard and a former race-car driver. All of them are pretty cute, but none of them are really that likeable. But that's okay, because this game is very interesting and the little challenges you are faced with are pretty cool, too. For example, you can send two colleagues to deal with certain job types, and you can even switch out a certain character for another one. Everything from paychecks to overtime, well, they're all in the game c9d1549cdd

How to play the Strategy game: Atlantic, 1943. Operation Overlord, the Allied invasion of northern France, is about to begin. The invasion will be the first real test of the Allied strategy. The US forces - led by the 1st British Armored Division - will land at Sword Beach, Saint-Valery-en-Caux, June 6th. The first US Army battles will begin on D-Day. The first US landings signal the beginning of the biggest battle of this campaign. The goal of the game is to direct the player to establish his forces' positions, build roads and units to support the strategic plan and defend the Base of Operations, leading his army to victory. Atlantic 1943 is a turn based top-down game. Every game is played from the view of the Commander, who has to make all the decisions required to accomplish his mission. A turn has three phases: Movement, Orders and Reactions. * Movement: "Move" your units by one space for every "Move" action card you play, and this action can only be played at the start of a turn, and only for any unit that is currently on the same space as the order card you are activating. A play order can only be played once, but can be played on many units during a turn. * Orders: In this phase, the commander plays one or more order cards to a specific unit. Cards have various effects and specific abilities: Drive, Capture, Assault or Move. A card may have multiple effects, giving them multiple values, so the commander may have to pay a points cost to play cards, depending on the value of the card. * Reactions: The player must react to the current situation by playing his reaction cards. The commander places his cards onto a card table, before drawing a card face down. Then the player must decide whether or not to play the cards or not. When a battle begins, the order phase is the first phase of the game. Units can only move in the order phase, allowing you to move units to locations where they can assist in an upcoming attack. In the movement phase, your units move to the desired location. This is also where you can pre-position units and learn their strengths and weaknesses. Your units can also attack other units and buildings. Units may be deployed at any location on the board. The battle phase consists of two rounds of actions, with each round having its own objectives. On each of these rounds, – Behind The scenes Legend has it that in 1992 a section of the town walls in Rhaetian Switzerland exploded. The incident, known as the Rhaetian explosion or the Ceneri incident is the reason why Switzerland's Ceneri nuclear power plant never opened. In this Article we'll be taking a trip into the Ceneri's trenches. Welcome to The Breach. The room is quiet. The only sounds are the gentle tick-tick of the clock and the low rumble of the power plant below. It's almost midnight. The security technician left twenty minutes ago, telling us we should be fine. There is a scent of antiseptic in the air. My back aches. The clock on the desk shows 11:55pm. The blinking red LED on the control screen next to the clock says that, yes, we've just over seven minutes to go. In the security cabin, my colleague Claire stands against the wall. She is a quiet young woman with a pale face. Her cheeks and neck are a sickly shade of green. "We're fine," she says, trying to put on a brave face. "He didn't expect us for at least another five minutes." "Your heart rate's high. Are you okay?" She looks up at the ceiling, still trying to read the reads glowing on the control panel. The lights in the room are dim. I feel as though I'm standing in the bowels of a city after a catastrophe. In the truck a man and a woman are chatting quietly on the radio. The man is reading a paper and smoking a cigarette. The woman fidgets with the window blind, showing off the scene outside. She is attractive. She has striking grey eyes and an aristocratic face. The blonde-haired man behind the desk smiles at Claire. "I'm fine," she says. "I'm used to taking late shifts." The man points at the newscast on the radio. "I couldn't turn it off once they told us what happened," the blonde man says, lighting up. I say nothing. The clock on the wall blinks past 11:59pm. The countdown continues.
