In this game, you are running your own space center that helps to fund your dream project. That project consists of building a very expensive ship that can perform a certain feat. In Rocket Science, you start out with a small spaceship that has a very short range. This spaceship has a limited amount of fuel. If you miss your jump, your spaceship will burn up and you must begin again.You can also send your spaceship to a repair shop at various space stations, which are located in many different galaxies. The repair shop will do its best to fix your spaceship, but, in the end, you must either pay for it with in-game currency or find a new spaceship, which you can obtain with your currency. What's included: 10 unique difficulty levels for your players to play on A ton of free content, with plenty of room to expand and add your own With your hard-earned money, you can add content to the game Easy access to purchase add-ons that add more features Space stations you can visit to repair your spaceship Career mode so you can build a space center New technologies New levels of challenges New shapes of challenges Automatic time limit passes Additional game content and variants Experimental features you can play with Community support and Play-tests Highly optimized for Android and iPhone/iPads SFX available in English, German, French, Spanish, Italian, Hungarian and Polish Features:For those who made the transition from mobile to PC, this game is being made as a 'stylized hybrid', meaning: • The core mechanics will be similar between PC and mobile. • The user interface will be different, with the possible exception of repairing your spaceship. • The game will also feature the more casual and relaxed atmosphere of our mobile game. • More polish will be put into every aspect of the game. • The PC version will feature all the new content that has been added since release of the mobile version. • The total length of the game will be around 7 hours. • You can buy the game when it

The PlayStation VR makes for a propitious simulator when skiing on terrain as steep as this one. I recently made a mockery of two of my current sports (football and basketball) and for a change I chose skiing. After a little consulting I managed to get a dual-pacer on my back but got stuck at the end and narrowly missed the jump. Better still, I did not fall off. To be fair, VR has never been my sport. I was right at the back at the mountain's end when it came to questioning what would be fun and the first thing that came to my mind was "Won't somebody please think of the children?". There's no wind and I can't jump vertically at all. To think my world record is only 249. You've got to be pretty crazy. Luckily there is an option for the VR-fix that's starting to develop. And while it's not perfect, for a cheap and cheerful set-up it's unbeatable. Whether it's VR or non-VR that doesn't matter, as long as it's fun. The spring-loaded Go Pro VR Checkpoint Hyper X2 sticks out four or five times the size of your average smartphone in your hand for simple set-up and an experience that's unmissable. I've not been skiing in VR and I don't actually enjoy it, but I would like to have a copy of Ben's shedder on my VR mountain and it would be a natural running-off move on any hold. Although, make no assumptions, it will not come. Ski sport: Grab-off Skier: Billie Storm You've got to like skiing to experience it in VR. It requires proper respect for gravity as well as a little cojones, ideally both in equal measure. I used to spend a lot of time in the water as a kid, gaining renown for falling off my boat on a regatta more times than I care to remember, but skiing? Really not my scene. The first thing you notice about Ski Sport is that it's not a snowboarding game. That means that despite Ski Sport's obvious inspiration (having conveniently happened to be making its way onto my PS4 the same month that snowboarding hit the market) it's a bit of a ski haven. There are a couple of snowboarders in the mountain but they are just here to buy the rank goodies. Ski Sport isn't pinching a winner from

The Circle has been created. Every man, woman and beast has one. Only they can see the Circle for what it is. Their only goal is to stop it. They follow the same rules. To Protect, to Survive. To Get to the End. But are we really the same people as before? Gameplay The Circle is a free to play, open world, first-person survival horror game with a dark, and a futuristic setting. Inspired by the Dark games, and the Steam cult classic, 'Blood', the game centers around 3 main characters. 3 characters 3 main characters. 2 is the protagonist. He will need to survive. 1 is the director. Direct his actions as the seasons change. The 3rd is an NPC. A passive character, there to show the player what to do, but will leave the player to carry on. Both 2 and the director have the ability to take commands from the NPC at any time. So you can be prepped and ready to play, or be seduced by the game, and not be required to do anything. There will be 9 seasons. 1 good, 1 bad and 7 indifferent seasons. Each season will feature 3 main events, and a number of smaller events. All in a unique setting. The game will center around the 2 characters, that need to reach a certain location at the end of each season. In doing so, they have to make their way around a number of 'haunts'. Old abandoned buildings, and roads with a number of entry points to them. It will give the game an unique feel. The final aim of each season will be to reach one of the sanctuaries. The endings of each season will be unique and tied to a story, with 2 main key endings. The game will be based on crafting and resources. The NPC will have a desire to purchase everything they see. And once they begin constructing their items in their 'workshop', they will run out of materials. The player will have to gather resources to craft new items. Both useful and a little frivolous. During the crafting process, you will gain experience. Which will allow you to level up, increasing your equipment stats, ability to craft, and increased ability to climb around the world. It will enable you to progress through the game. There are no paid upgrades. The player will progress
