So, my list should look like this: ['brown', 'fox', 'jumps', 'over', 'lazy', 'dog'] My current solution is very long and I don't think that it is the right approach. How can I make it short? I = [l for l in re.findall("[^\s]+", line)] A: Try \S+: >>> str = "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog" >>> print([x for x in re.findall('\S+', str) if not re.match('\s+', x)]) ['brown', 'fox', 'jumps', 'over', 'lazy', 'dog'] A: You can use a character set: >>> re.findall('\w+',s) ['brown', 'fox', 'jumps', 'over', 'lazy', 'dog'] >>> re.findall('\S+',s) ['brown', 'fox', 'jumps', 'over', 'lazy', 'dog'] Dangerous patients: legal and ethical issues. The decision to admit a patient for observation and/or treatment continues to pose a number of legal and ethical issues for nurses. The situation is made more difficult when a nurse is called to determine whether there is a particular condition that warrants admission of a particular patient. This decision can be extremely difficult and, in the absence of clear and written policies, nurses must rely on personal instinct, intuition, and experience. The law in such situations is not easy to define or comprehend, and the legal issues Occ13bf012

Microsoft has a half-hour long demo video up on its Kinect blog, which uses the improved tracking to show the player the views and faces of other players as you walk around the room. Though we previously knew Microsoft wasn't going to require you to buy a TV to go with the Kinect, it had previously announced that a camera would be added to the headset to give you additional information about the players and friends in the room.
