Ask HN: What's different between a C compiler and a C++ compiler? - Brian_K_White A friend suggested that a C compiler (e.g. GCC) is nothing more than a pair of books that use rules of logic to help convert text to binary, whereas a C++ compiler uses a type system to convert text to binary. The reason behind this is that, supposedly, a C++ compiler can handle variables of more than one type, whereas a C compiler cannot. Am I off base? ===== gus_massa A C++ compiler can handle variables of more types. A C compiler can handle variables only of a few types. But with some work the C compiler can be modified to handle everything. Q: Wordpress Amazon S3 - Get the file name I am using Amazon S3 to store Wordpress data. I get the URL using this query: The problem is that when I download the file, I need to get the filename and I can't work it out. A: You can use the REST API's getObject ACL method to retrieve the XML response. You will get a XML file that shows the headers and other information and inside you will find the headers: "your-etag" "your-last-modified" More details here The objective is to parse the xml and there is an open source solution by StackOverflow here. Technological evolution of multilayered coating for high-performance polymer optical elements. Multilayered polymer optical elements (MOEs) have been developed since the 1970s, with the objective of building optical components that are lighter, sharper, and more flexible than conventional MOEs. The construction process consists of sequential layering of hard and soft materials. Since the beginning of the twentieth century, the multi-layered MOE has
