The fighting game, a genre mainly included into arcade games, evolved into the grid-based fighting games, such as the characters of the Street Fighter and of the Tekken series. Fighting games have evolved for a wide area covering genres such as the RPG, the action, the simulation etc. Each genre has its own rules, its own flow, its own characteristic and the players has his personal preferences. The theme of the main character is to eliminate all the others, but the concept behind the game is the core to all the genres. But how can you follow the main character to eliminate his "opponents" is the essence of the fighting game genre. This is how the design of the grid-based fighting game Elder Dragon: Fist of the North Star Orochi XX has evolved. RPG and grid-based fighting game Unlike the traditional fighting game, the grid-based fighting game is based on the combat situations and the combat itself has become a common part of the RPG genre. The characters of the Elder Dragon: Fist of the North Star Orochi XX is based on the characters of the role playing game, of the fighting game genre of the same title. The role of Orochi is based on the story of Edo, which many people will not have their knowledge, as it has been repeated in many films and video games. But the designs of the characters differ based on the genre, as for the role playing game it has a typical role of a monster, his physique is also exaggerated, so it is not possible to have a human form. The role of Orochi also has many abilities, it is not composed of a large variety of attacks, but to be able to use the weapons of the characters of the fight, it is necessary to have a type of explosive attack. It has a large and visible blade, it also has a gap with a large skull in the abdomen, which explains the summoning of monsters, they can add their strength to the attack of the player and have an advantage in the fight, on the other hand, it can be feared, by the way that it is part of their attack that they can cause the death of the opponent, for you to be aware of this situation is the first priority.
