□ □ 5/5 Atlas of the Lands Between · 11-03-19 @Ronaldus is a really good game and it's also a really good play. Just in case you haven't seen it you should. I've got quite a bit of gameplay on the game but I'm only reviewing it at level 10 which is still the main story but you're free to keep playing it at any point and explore the lands between, getting all the achievements and gathering all the data and equipping all the data you can get with your barter points and you can keep playing past the main story until you feel like it. Game starts with a tutorial on things that you need to do like quick save, take photos of your dungeon, which you can upload to others to see etc. It's a very easy to understand and does a good job of explaining things. □ □ 3.5/5 Elder Scrolls Online Review: Game of The Year On the whole, this is a pretty good product. You might not really dig the game play but it is a unique take on a MMO and it does appeal to people in the same way Skyrim did. The game is relatively easy to get into (which I wasn't really expecting though). □ □ 5/5 Like A Boss The game is a lot of fun. The combat in it is faster paced than I expected it to be (and it is interesting), and that makes it a very enjoyable game to play. The graphics are pretty decent and you get to make some great looking characters. It's fun, it's well put together, it's fairly easy to learn and once you get into the groove of it, it makes you feel like you are in control of the actual storyline. The story itself is very interesting and compelling, and I didn't even feel like I was being fed too much of it. I actually wasn't expecting it to be so good, but it's even better than I expected. □ □ 4/5 Bold, Weird and Awesome This game was one of the most fun I've played in a long time. The combat is intense, the graphics are superb, and the story is compelling. I love the setting, the possibilities are endless, and you'll find yourself deep inside the Lands Between seeking out new challenges and bff6bb2d33

Dow up; @Apple up; @Walmart down; @Walgreens down; Tesla up... which company is going to make it all the way to the top this week? Last week, I "hinted" that Tesla would be the winner, and I'm not so sure anymore. Here are the results from this week: Last Week: Tesla (TSLA), Dow (DIA), Apple (AAPL), Walmart (WMT), Walgreens (WAG) Next Week: @Tesla — at $202.25, TSLA is down 0.76% Last Year: Tesla (TSLA), Dow (DIA), Apple (AAPL), Walmart (WMT), Walgreens (WAG) So which company is making a move? Here is what I'm considering: 1.) Tesla: Long-Term Growth Potential - Based on the company's current growth rate, plus the fact that they have some significant capital projects coming online, it's possible that Tesla could (1) double in price by the end of 2019 and, (2) double in market cap by the end of 2020. 2.) Apple: Incremental Growth - Apple is stable today, but it is quite undervalued, which will help them significantly when they are making acquisitions (like they did with Apple Music). Their shares have tripled since 2013, and in comparison, the S&P SPY has only doubled in that time. 3.) Walmart: Near-Term Growth - With Walmart on track to have $1 trillion in annual revenue by 2025, the market appears to be acting as though they are undervalued today (vs. $201 billion in annual revenue last year). That puts them in a position to make some nice moves in the next few years. 4.) Walgreens: Very Near-Term Growth - Walgreens growth is limited by regulation, but the company is on an aggressive growth path and, in addition to that, they are reducing their dependence on store based gross profit. 5.) Walmart & Apple - These are pure growth plays. I expect both to be higher by 2020, although with a trailing P/E of 20 on Apple vs. 21 on Walmart, I think Walmart has more room to grow, as a pure growth play. Final Analysis You may be surprised at how much I changed my mind on Tesla this
