What's new:

(at Sea) Description: On the way to the court of the great kings, your servants carried this sound-making machine aboard your ship. These are the pipes of the kakashi, sacred to the fey. they are said to make even a river into an ocean. This is the story of a very old and wicked witch, who used the sounds of the kakashi to make it seem that there were many old ocean spirits, hungry for terrorizing the shores of the land. Then she would call up the evil spirits of the deep and transform them into gundegoes, and then she would control them with her magic. It all sounded really great, but soon it came to reality check. And now you are carrying with you this kakashi, to help the wild fey in their battle against the dark one. You only hope to rescue your comrades, and maybe even your grandmother.

Production: This is the part of the strip when I am trying to really get that epic feeling. I will have some magic inside, visions and teleport etc. I'll start with building up an atmosphere, and then build up the story into one big epic that will build up my PCs. I can use the mutiple moods in WotC's books to build up emotional moments with the PCs. I start with the characters tone (what they think the story is about), and then work backwards building the tone into effects. We have a huge vault of emotions, and a ton of ways of bringing them out. This one can be read here: This is the part of the strip where I test some gameplay mechanics, and also give myself little challenges that that I have to work my way around. When I wasn't working on the kakashi (all creatures that I will be working on actually give some challenges to GMs and players), I was putting in the mutltitude of reactions that I have within the game. That is one of the great things about playing with Fate, you get to test your rulebook and say "What if my players think this". So I am working on those here. Some of my challenges include: What spells can I use in my highly powered campaign: Energies, Loose Focus (stowing away a spell card), Monster Manual (hiding as a lizard), Teleport/Teleport Sidestep (teleporting over the kakashi), race specific skills (based on alignment), Darkvision
