A PERTH woman was shocked when a doctor apparently forgave her three strokes and $10,000 bill for wrong procedures. Mary Langrana was over the moon after getting the good news. But it may not have been a stroke at all. Ms Langrana spent some time lying in bed with abdominal pain, heartburn and nausea, and insisted it was her monthly period. She told her GP she had been having "period symptoms" for years, and at least one other visit he called it a "normal period". She had a pain-free period after an ultrasound suggested a hernia, but then found herself being rushed to hospital the next morning with severe cramps. Ms Langrana said her GP booked her in to see a different doctor who placed a "smart bleed" probe on her abdomen and told her it was a "normal period", and not a hernia or a pregnancy. He said she "couldn't be having" a stroke, and also booked in an MRI that showed a small clot in the left side of her head, but dismissed a stroke as a diagnosis that he "didn't think was correct". Her husband Robert Langrana today revealed he learned of his wife's stroke in the hospital when he woke up, which made him
