cutlery interruptus features the party forced to battle the temple priest and his guard. poledouris provides robust and primal action writing propelled by a pounding timpani percussion line joined by tuba, bass, a string ostinato and metallic percussive accents. at 1:58 we segue into akiros magic where he engages and wins a magical duel with the temple priest. spritely woodwinds, a string sustain and an at times comic-lighthearted underscore for the scene, the cue concludes with fragmentary statements of conans theme that emerge from the melodic line as the party successfully escapes. conan's friend jehnna was, in fact, still alive. the battle ensued, but at the very end, she used her magical abilities to heal conan and his friends of their wounds, and they were about to fight the newly returned dagoth. jehnna, however, was captured by dagoth. before he could sacrifice her, conan and his friends intervened, and led a successful attack on the dungeon. they then lead the attack on dagoth's palace. conan and his friends managed to fight and slay the rampaging dagoth, and jehnna was saved. however, their efforts were not enough to save the kingdom of shadizar, and they returned to cimmeria. around this time, the wachowskis were brought in to direct the second conan film. in april 2008, the wachowskis submitted a draft to the studio, which was met with enthusiasm. however, the wachowskis later withdrew from the project, citing creative differences with the studio. it is unclear whether or not all of the other conan films planned after the 1982 film would have been made. in the original script, a planned third conan film was titled king conan: the dragon's blade, and would have been about a rogue cimmerian, kalid bahram, who would have been an antihero, rather than a heroic character. this film never got made, but a script was written by andy serkis. the script was also rewritten by john milius.

as they pass through the gates, there is a slow pan around the court with the camera rotating to show the audience the now more familiar shadizar skyline. the music continues as the pair are marched through the side gate, into the great hall where we see a crowd mill around, the music continues as conan is brought before a dais. conan is sat in a high seat looking down on the small crowd. as he is surrounded by the representative council, we hear an ominous brass instrument which is played later in the film. a ring is placed on conan's finger and the crowd is ushered away. the music continues as we see conan is ushered into the throne room and presented to queen taramis and king conan as he is led into the room. conan is sat in the chair, his hands are placed on the arms of the chair, as a bell is rung and the camera rotates around him, showing the council of shadizar. as conan is taken to the tower, with the view from behind the camera rotating over his shoulder, the music continues, as the camera pans across the cliffs, we hear the call to arms music, which is heard throughout the film. in the tower there is a small orchestra of a bass and piccolo trumpet, oboe, clarinet and bassoon. this continues as conan is told to get out his weapons and blades and is shown the weapons of shadizar. the music continues as conan is shown the various chests of shadizar and taken to a small chamber where he is shown a large chest and told to open it. conan is shown a jade sceptre and a white ebony dagger. as conan is led into the great hall, the music continues as we see the crowd gathered, with the camera slowly rotating around the room. the music continues as conan is led to the throne, as the camera is slowly panned from behind the dais. when we reach the side of the dais, the music continues as conan is presented to the council of shadizar, as he is crowned. 5ec8ef588b
